

Watercolor Society of South Texas

The Watercolor Society of South Texas meets September through May of each year on the third Sunday of the month. The meetings are at The Art Center of Corpus Christi, 100 N. Shoreline Blvd., Corpus Christi, TX from 2-4 PM.

Refreshments are served at the regular monthly meeting, and following a business session, a watercolor artist provides a demonstration. Prominent local watercolorists are frequently invited. On special occasions, for instance a period when a workshop is scheduled, the Society is fortunate to have a workshop. Occasionally, a demonstration may feature topics or procedures of interest to those who paint watercolor, such as framing or reproduction techniques.

The annual Watercolor Society of South Texas exhibit is held at the Art Center of Corpus Christi during the month of March, the show is open to all current members of the Society members who are also current members of the Art Center. All entries, which meet the criteria for community acceptance as set by the Art Center guidelines, will be hung. The show is judged and a reception is held at which time prizes are awarded.

The Watercolor Society joins with the South Texas Art League and the Southwest Sculpture Society for the exhibit held in February at Del Mar College's Joseph Cain Gallery for the Tri-Group Show. This is a juried show, in which the judge decides which works will be shown. Prizes are awarded during the reception.

A noted artist and teacher are customarily engaged to present a five-day workshop, usually in February. The schedule is subject to the artist's availability. Individuals who sign up for the workshop pay the fee determined. The artist who conducts this workshop is also the judge for the annual Watercolor Society of South Texas Exhibit.
